TIFFIN
MOTORHOMES AUSTRALIA

Allegro Breeze

The eagerly awaited MY16 Breeze from Tiffin Motorhomes Australia is here! A number of changes have been made from last year's model. Front and rear caps have been redesigned with a much more modern approach. The coach is now taller overall and features a completely flat floor inside. This has also increased basement bin storage considerably! It also features an all new dash, timber look flooring and an independent front suspension setup!

You'll still find all the essential features from previous models like dual living room slide-outs, 5kw Cummins Onan generator, air ride suspension with auto leveling feature, LED smart TV's with auto satellite system, 600W of solar, 12V compressor fridge, 4000W inverter, separate shower / toilet, memory foam queen sized bed, generous kitchen, ample storage, washing machine, dual roof mount air conditioners and so much more!

All backed by Tiffin's manufacturer's warranty. Test drives & inspections welcomed!
In stock and awaiting your inspection! Call on 07 5563 2559 to arrange a time!

2009 SUNCAMPER SARINA

Presented by Caravan World

TIDY package

With its modified door, the 2009 Suncamper Sarina makes a welcoming home away from home.

'Whirr-clunkers' is a somewhat unkind name bestowed on campervans and motorcampers, usually by people who are woken in the middle of the night by owners opening and closing the sliding door as they dash to the tourist park's loo.

There are various schools of thought on sliding doors fitted, in particular, to motorcampers. By way of explanation, motorcampers are converted from larger vans – Fiat Ducatos, Mercedes Benz Sprinters and Iveco Dailys, to name a few – and all come with a large nearside sliding door to expedite speedy commercial deliveries.

Some travellers are happy to have the standard sliding door, but others who really like the size of the motorcamper would prefer to have something else. A few RV builders have developed a special panel that replaces the sliding door and forms a moulding which can accept a standard motorhome door.

Sydney-based Suncamper, which builds a variety of campervans and motorhomes, developed a normal door fitting for its Iveco Daily van conversion. This 2009 model is an interesting variation on Suncamper's Sarina, developed in response to customer feedback.

THE DOOR

Suncamper used the Iveco Daily 35S14 van for this 2009 Sarina conversion. It is 7.1m (23ft 4in) long and powered by a 2.3L 100kW turbodiesel engine. Our Sarina came with Iveco's six-speed Agile AMT gearbox. It also came with airbags for both cab seats and the Electronic Stability Program (ESP), which includes traction control.

From top: The driver and passenger seats swivel around to form part of the dinette; a roomy interior; the Iveco Daily's sliding door has been removed and replaced with a moulded panel and 'standard' door creating room for a larger kitchen.

On the road, the Daily is very much the typical Euro van and a nice easy driver. Unlike its Italian stablemate, the Fiat Ducato, the Daily is a rear-wheel-drive van. Although the van has the smaller Iveco engine, the 100kW delivers the necessary power and torque and the Daily is no slouch on the road.

In a minor revamp of the van, the sliding door has been removed and the aforementioned moulded panel fills the gap. It's designed to accept a Dometic half-window door and fit the profile of the van. It's a very good looking job that replicates the panel lines of the Iveco. For insulation purposes, the van roof has been lined with 30mm of foam and marine ply.

More conventional items are the Seitz hopper windows, gas cylinder locker, Thetford toilet, roof-mounted air-conditioner, electric step, Winegard antenna and Fiamma awning.

MORE BANG

Inside the 2009 Sarina, one of the benefits of the revamped door arrangement is immediately obvious – the smaller door area provides more space for other things. A slight disadvantage of this setup, though, is that it makes the area feel more confined.

Clockwise from top: The sideways lounges can be used as two single beds or made up into a double; the flexible-hose shower in the bathroom also supplies the washbasin; there's a decent amount of storage under the rear seats.

There are sideways-facing lounges in the rear, which can be used as single beds or made up into a double bed. A kitchen bench fills the rest of the nearside and a small bathroom is opposite.

One of the design challenges in the Iveco is that although it has a flat floor and swivelling seats can be fitted, the pedestal-mounted handbrake on the left-hand side of the driver's seat can restrict seat movement. Suncamper has overcome this issue and both cab seats swivel around, with the driver's seat making up part of the small dinette.

The internal decor may appear slightly square, but it does have a purposeful look about it. Curtains are fitted to the front cab and the rear doors, but the wall windows have integrated blinds. Those familiar with this style of motorcamper will immediately recognise the flexible design. The small dinette at the front means that you can have the double bed permanently set up.

There are the usual storage facilities in the rear – both lounges have under-seat storage, although part of the storage is occupied by both the nearside water heater and the offside gas cylinder locker. Above, there are overhead lockers which are supplemented on both sides by a small shelf that can be used when not travelling.

Lighting is supplied by a rear wall-mounted fluorescent and halogen reading lights on either side. Powerpoints are also fitted on either side, one beside the offside wardrobe and the other at the back of the kitchen bench.

USER-FRIENDLY

In motorcamper/motorhome design circles there's a certain logic that says smaller motorcampers/ motorhomes often have bigger kitchens than much larger motorhomes, despite the latter having considerably more internal space.

True to form, the Sarina does have a relatively large kitchen bench – large enough to fit a two-burner cooktop and stainless steel sink. The latter does not have a drainer fitted, but there is certainly space for it. Under the cooktop is a Dometic RM2350 90L fridge and surrounding that are four cupboards and three drawers.

That other kitchen essential, the microwave, sits mounted in the cabinet opposite with a wardrobe below and a small cupboard above. It's at a user-friendly height.

Sitting almost amidsthips in the 2009 Sarina is the compact bathroom. It comes with a flexible-hose shower rose that also supplies water to the corner basin, and a bench-style Thetford cassette toilet. Ventilation is from a fan hatch and lighting from a ceiling-mounted fluorescent lamp.

As mentioned previously, both the driver's cab seats swivel around, forming a small lounge/dining area with the rear seat. Overhead lockers with shelves sit above the table and the area above the driver's cab is fitted out as an open shelf.

THE BOTTOM LINE

It's not hard to figure out why the standard door modification – seen in this 2009 Suncamper Sarina – is popular among RVers who prefer the motorcamper-style of travelling. You get most of the benefits of a larger motorhome (without a whirr-clunker door), and have a narrower and lower vehicle for navigating city streets and enjoying better fuel economy on the open road.

The Iveco Daily's length still gives plenty of interior space and room for the motorhoming luxuries generally considered essential for modern-day travellers.

BUYING TIPS AND HINTS

- ✓ Check the price – if it's too good to be true, it probably is
- ✓ Check the phone number
- ✓ Talk directly with the seller (not an answering machine)
- ✓ Be wary if a seller asks you to transfer funds overseas or interstate using a service like Western Union for example (this is a common fraudulent practice)
- ✓ Avoid communicating only by email and NEVER send your personal details to an untrusted email address (Bauer Trader Media does not publish email addresses)
- ✓ TRUST YOUR INSTINCTS – At the first suspicion, re-assess

Thirsting for some outback adventure, we towed a semi-offroad 2010 Supreme Spirit Limited Edition through the Flinders Ranges, SA.

Home on the ranges

The mission: find a caravan that will hold its own in the Flinders Ranges without skimping on comforts. It had been many years since I'd checked out the dust and dry beauty of the Flinders, and I reasoned it would be the best place to test the toughness of the 2010 Supreme Spirit Limited Edition, a semi-offroad van.

After landing in Adelaide and picking up the van and tow car, we began our journey north. It was immediately apparent that our utilitarian 76 Series LandCruiser was more than capable of towing the Spirit on the bitumen.

At city speeds, the van felt steady and stable, and as the highway opened and we accelerated to cruising speed there was very little pitching or yawing.

WHAT'S INSIDE

It's clear that Supreme put considerable effort into presentation on this 2010 model. There were no rough edges on the cabinetry and I was pretty happy to be spending a couple of nights in it.

The layout of the Spirit lends itself to easy living: forward bedroom, mid-offside kitchen with dinette opposite, and a full-width rear bathroom, the door for which is angled towards the main entrance.

The bedroom has a padded headboard and shelf behind, bedside shelves with bench space and a small drawer and cupboard below. There's enough space to hang up a few days' worth of clothes in the wardrobes. A couple of lockers sit above the bedhead, either side of which is a multidirectional halogen reading light. The bed itself measures

1.8x1.5m (5ft 11in x 4ft 11in), above which is a Four Seasons hatch – a godsend on the cooler Flinders nights. As is usual, the bed base lifts on gas struts for access to the storage area beneath.

The kitchen bench is finished in blue laminate that even extends over the lift-up lid of the cooktop. In terms of storage, there's enough to satisfy the needs of a couple of intrepid travellers for a couple of nights or more. There are two drawers and one soapbox; three cupboards above the wheel arch; one floor locker (hiding the 12V Shurflo water pump) beneath the oven; and three lockers above the bench – the Sharp microwave is set between the two main lockers.

There are two powerpoints in the kitchen either side and well away from the sink, and a JVC DVD/MP3/stereo system (connected to two DNA speakers inside and two outside) is mounted into the overhead woodwork at the forward end.

The slide-out pantry, between the bench and 186L Dometic three-way fridge, is split into two sections: one above and one below, each with three shelves. It's a setup that allows you to easily separate your non-perishables to minimise rattling, etc.

Clockwise from top: A refined leather lounge – note the drawer at the base of the 'L'; two separate pantries in the kitchen; simple but elegant bathroom.

"I loved how this 2010 Spirit towed, particularly off the bitumen"

Top: Plenty of storage and bench space in the kitchen.

Internal cooking facilities (there's a barbecue outside) include a Swift cooktop (three gas, one electric), a griller and oven, with a stainless steel rangehood above.

A waist-high bench separates the dinette from the entrance. It's small, but proved a handy spot for keeping my travelling backpack, and the deep drawer and cupboard were hardly challenged by my other bits and pieces.

The L-shaped dinette will seat two comfortably. Or, at a squeeze, three could dine here. I particularly liked the drawer storage at the base of the 'L' – if you've ever been on hands and knees trying to reach something at the back, you'll agree that a drawer or similar is ideal. Of course, you can still access the main under-seat storage area, but you'll need to lift the cushions and ply bases to do so.

I also liked the lockers above the dinette: the plastic inserts on each door are not only tough, they let you see inside – again, it's all about accessibility.

The two halogen spotlights in the dinette do a good job of illuminating this area at dinner time. During the day, a Four Seasons hatch in the entry shed plenty of natural light on the subject.

The bathroom is simple and quite elegant. A vanity unit with a washbasin and a couple of cupboards below and lockers above separates the fully-moulded shower (with 12V fan) that fills the nearside from the LG front-loader washing machine. Two good-sized cupboards sit atop the washing machine. The Thetford cassette toilet, forward of the washer, has a 12V fan above. The bathroom door swings on a piano hinge – it's strong.

The 2010 Spirit was also fitted with a Winegard TV antenna (without the flatscreen – that was an option), as well as an Aircommand Ibis air-conditioner. I didn't have the opportunity to test this, although the hot SA outback would've been the perfect location to do so, but I've no qualms about this particular unit. I should point out that stoppers have been fitted to all drawers except those in the bedside cabinets.

OUTER LIMITS

Externally, the 2010 Supreme Spirit Limited Edition looks the part for something touted as a semi-offroad van. There isn't a cutaway rear, but remember: it's not designed to tackle Cape York.

We pulled into Parachilna about 7pm looking forward to eating a kangaroo steak at the Prairie Hotel. But it was closed! So, stomachs growling, we checked the map and headed into Parachilna Gorge, road dust forming a dense cloud behind us, to a small but equipped caravan park. The entire way, the van was subjected to rocky inclines and declines. And gravel.

Unhitching the van, I checked the checkerplate skirt that runs 310mm high along both sides and halfway up the front. It was dusty, but unscratched and undented.

External features include a full-length Dometic awning, Camec door with security screen, a drop-down picnic table, LED taillights, a stainless steel slide-out barbecue, Al-Ko quick-drop corner jacks, and a couple of speakers (one of which is covered by the door when it's open).

The body of the van is fastened to a DuraGal chassis with 6in rails running to the axles and rocker roller suspension – 4in rails take over from there to the rear. Electric Al-Ko drum brakes are connected to the 15in alloy wheels.

The drawbar is home to two 9kg gas cylinders and a freshwater tap, which is sensibly protected by a piece of checkerplate. The gal-lined front boot has two access doors rather than the more-common single door and Supreme put thought into its overall design, with mounting points provided for the wheel jack winder and wheel brace. The jack itself has its own secure shelf. The boot also keeps a 100Ah battery, the Smartcharger and Break Safe unit.

Underneath, the two 80L water tanks are protected by galvanised sheeting – great for rough tracks. The PVC plumbing withstood our test, but I would consider covering it up before tackling a track such as the Oodnadatta (which I reckon this Spirit would handle).

THE BOTTOM LINE

A trip through Brachina Gorge along the Geological Trail finished our Flinders Ranges adventure. I loved how this 2010 Spirit towed, particularly off the bitumen, and at no stage did I worry that we'd 'punished' it enough. It was like a faithful dog, always keeping up.

What's more, this van allows you to do the national parks and the tricky terrain that comes with them in comfort, with confidence.

Did somebody say the Gibb River Road?

2011 CONQUEROR UEV 490 EVOLUTION

Presented by Caravan World

The 2011 Conqueror UEV 490 Evolution is built to tackle the outback in comfort.

Seductive beast

This camper is a beast, and that is intended in the best possible way. With an exterior reminiscent of one of the Australian Army's Defenders and a list of inclusions and design features that reads more like something from Better Homes and Gardens, the 2011 UEV 490 Evolution would look equally at home trundling down an Afghani road or camped by a Kimberley billabong.

Originating from South Africa, where Conqueror has been building offroad trailers for the military for many years, the trailers come to Australia looking pretty tough, and leave the Conqueror Australia factory a different animal altogether.

These campers have been tested across the country, including up Cape York and down the tracks of Fraser, and they're geared to handle corrugations and survive outback tracks.

Looking over this 2011 model, there is literally a place for everything – from the axe and shovel holders up front to the fire grill mounted on the spare at the back. There's even a spare stub axle on the spare mount!

The hot-dipped galvanised steel chassis is a monocoque design, so that the whole camper retains rigidity. The body panels are galvanised and powder-coated alloy. Riding on 285/75 tyres, the suspension is a custom-built independent trailing arm system with slightly soft springs to better deal with corrugations.

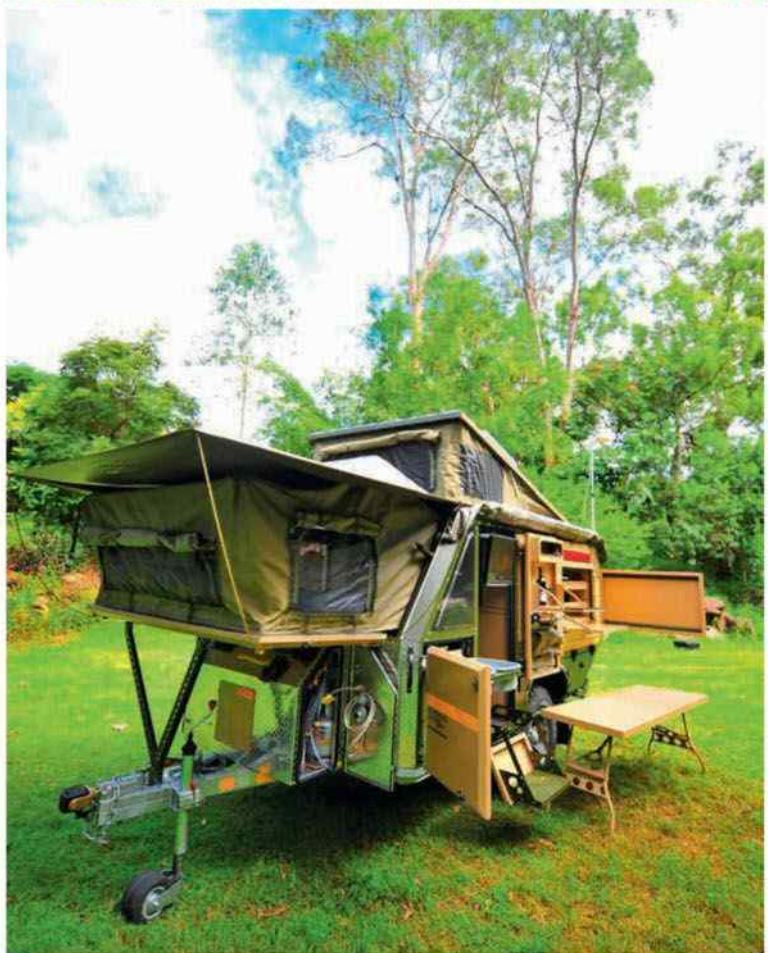

EASY DOES IT

A lazy man's camper trailer, set up of the 2011 UEV 490 is fairly modular. You can literally pull over, open the door and collapse into the main double bed. Or if you're staying longer, there's a second double bed that takes about five minutes to extend out over the drawbar. Another configuration is to sleep in the second double bed and turn the main bed into a dinette with enough seating for six.

The canvas is all heavy-duty ripstop, although you don't need any canvas at all for quick stops. Fully set up, there's a large awning for both sides of the camper, protecting the kitchen and bathroom from the elements, and the second double bed has a rubberised awning over it so you never have to pack up wet canvas into the bed. The Webasto diesel hot water system also provides ducted heating to the cabin.

And yes, we said bathroom. You need your own Porta Potti, but the enclosed ensuite includes a sink with glass splashback, hot and cold water, and storage on the offside of the camper, right outside the second access door.

TRAVEL IN STYLE

The pop-up roof provides standing room inside the camper and an extra window for airflow. Inside, especially with the dinette set up, there is plenty of room to move around and storage space everywhere. An entertainment system is built in, including CD/DVD player, flatscreen 12V television and speakers.

The electronics system is all controlled from one board inside where you'll find a water tank meter

From top: The slide-out kitchen lacks bench space but a standalone table does the job nicely; everything has its place in the 2011 UEV 490.

Above: Two double beds provide multiple sleeping options. Right: The main bed converts into a dinette that seats six.

for the 150L of water onboard, Sinergex intelligent 12V meter, 12V outlets and breakers for the 240V and 12V systems.

Behind the 12V scenes, as it were, are a Victron Phoenix pure sine inverter, M300 Ctek charger, Ctek DC-DC charger and twin Optima 75Ah yellow top deep-cycle batteries. Coupled with the 140W solar panel on the roof our review model had, along with the standard portable 120W panel, you're pretty well set up for remote touring without worrying about your batteries or fridge.

The kitchen slides out of the nearside, and the lack of bench space is quickly redressed with the huge table stored right inside the door. Twin plastic sink tubs are useable and it's easy to clean and recycle water. A 74L fridge-freezer or 90L National Luna fridge came included. A two-burner Smev cooktop was also included, along with all of your cutlery and glasses. This 2011 UEV 490 is all about travelling in style, so Conqueror even figured out a way to pack real wine glasses along! The doors both double as pantries and there's a reach-through pantry on the nearside wall, so you can get to supplies inside or out. There's an access door to get to the fridge from inside as well.

THE BOTTOM LINE

A great marriage between military sensibility and feminine wiles, the 490 Evolution, as tested, with extra solar panel came in at $67,672 brand new in 2011. It came with a three year warranty on components and one year warranty overall, although, having seen these things perform offroad, best guess is you won't be needing much in the way of service.

Power up

Replacing your tow vehicle's seven-pin plug with a 12-pin plug.

With the advent of onboard batteries and bigger fridges in caravans, a need has developed for heavy-duty wiring from the vehicle to the van to keep the 12V needs of such equipment satisfied.

While many caravanners run an Anderson plug for this, it can be more convenient to use a 12-pin plug when you require multiple heavy-duty power wires to run to the caravan. In fact, many modern caravans already have a 12-pin plug as standard, so it becomes necessary to match it on the towing vehicle, unless you wish to go through the process of re-wiring your van's plug (and potentially voiding your new caravan warranty).

The 12-pin trailer plug will only fit a 12-pin vehicle plug, but with a 12-pin vehicle plug you can still plug in a standard seven-flat trailer plug.

Whether a 12-pin plug (where pins eight to 12 are much larger than one to seven and can accept much thicker-gauge wire into the back of these pins) is a satisfactory alternative to an Anderson plug is a bone of contention among some caravanners. Those against say the pins can be unreliable and there can be too much resistance in the circuit, causing the plug to melt. Those for the plug argue that you have potentially four extra wiring points for heavy current draw items in your van that you wouldn't be able to power easily otherwise. I won't enter that argument here; it's up to you to decide.

Words Philip Lord

This is simply a guide on how to replace your vehicle's trailer plug to match the 12-pin unit on your caravan. I also won't go into how to appropriately wire a heavy gauge power supply from the vehicle's battery to the trailer plug.

Please note that the thick gauge wires shown here are for illustrative purposes only – by the Australian Standards the battery supply wire insulation (position 8) should be orange; the auxiliaries wire (position 9) should be pink; the earth wire (position 10) should have white insulation; the rear fog light wire (position 11) should be grey, and the auxiliaries wire in position 12 should be violet.

You won't need much equipment for this job, basically just the 12-pin plug and some tools to fit it. These tools include a small Phillip's head screwdriver, a wire stripper, electrical tape and possibly a set of small spanners.

ON THE JOB

Start by disconnecting the battery and removing the old seven-pin trailer plug from the towbar or wherever it is attached to the vehicle. In this case, the plug was attached to the Jeep's towbar on a bracket and secured by bolts. There are a variety of trailer plugs on the market – seven pin flat, seven pin round small, seven pin round large – and there are different ways in which they are put together. Some are secured by screws, others with the collar that seals the wires as they enter the plug body.

In either case, you'll need to split the plug case so you can get to the wires. When you are looking at the wires – if it is a relatively new plug – you will notice that the connections are all clearly marked. As insurance against getting the wrong wires hooked up later, now is a good time to write down the connection colours and positions on the connector. Once you've marked this down, you can remove all the wires from the seven-pin plug.

You will need a small Phillip's head or flat screwdriver to do this. It can be quite fiddly so take your time. Also be aware that the wires might be corroded if the plug is old and you might need to 1 Disconnect the positive battery terminal.

2 Remove trailer plug housing from the rear of vehicle.

3 Write down the trailer wire colours and corresponding position number.

4 Remove collar on clip-together plug or remove screws on screw-secured plug.

5 Remove the wires from the seven-pin plug.

6 Fit the wires to the new 12-pin plug using the notes taken on wire colour and position.

snip them off adjacent to the connection if they won't budge. What is far more likely is that the wires will come free easily enough but will have corroded sufficiently that they will require cutting back to get to clean, corrosion-free wire before fitting to the new plug. Depending on the style of plug, you might have to remove the plastic clamp that groups the wires at the base of the plug.

With the wires removed from the old plug (make sure you remove the seven-pin plug's securing collar from the wiring cable), you can begin preparing the 12-pin plug for wire fitment. The 12-pin plug has two covers on it, one on each side of the plug body. One of the covers reveals the small seven pins and one of the large five pins.

The reverse side of the 12-pin plug accepts heavier gauge wires.

Strip heavy gauge wires in preparation for fitting to plug.

Fit power and earth wires to 12-pin plug.

Reattach covers to 12-pin plug casing.

Attach 12-pin plug to vehicle.

Begin by threading all the wires you intend to secure in the new 12-pin plug through the grommet that came with the plug. Then feed the small-gauge wires to the small seven-pin side of the plug and once you've checked that the wires are not corroded, secure each wire to its numbered location using the notes you made earlier. With the seven wires screwed down, secure the plastic clamp over the group of wires and close up that side of the plug using the cover plate and screws provided.

Now you can begin securing the large gauge wires to the feed points required on the large five-pin side of the plug. With the wires secured, close up the plug with the cover plate and screws provided.

Now the plug grommet can be secured to the base of the plug and, as an additional step against moisture getting into the plug, wrap electrical tape around the grommet.

Finally, the plug can be secured to the fitting point on the vehicle. Then re-fit the positive battery terminal to the battery post and check all circuits with a test light or multimeter.

Grey Nomads all over Australia are raving about the secret to freedom on the open road.

John Jeffreys, owner and Managing Director of The Motorhome Conversion Company in Slacks Creek, warns of the pitfalls for modern consumers.

An industry expert has emerged at just the right time with specialist advice for grey nomads and families in the market for their dream "getaway" recreational vehicle. John's company specialises in converting low kilometre pre-loved vehicles into luxury motorhomes and campervans.

Buyer Beware

"You have to be really careful these days," Mr Jeffreys says. "There are some good, honest operators out there but also some who are just out for the quick sale. If you don't know what you're doing it can not only cost you serious money but also ruin what are supposed to be the best years of your life full of fun, freedom and new experiences," he said.

It's true unless you are well schooled in all the ins and outs of the various vehicles it can be a daunting task.

Do Your Homework

Another major problem is that people don't do enough homework about what they really want. They end up with beds that are hard to get in or out of or difficult to make in the mornings. So what's the best recreational vehicle to buy?

John says it depends on three things:

1. Your needs and wants
2. Your budget
3. Your personal tastes.

"You can save up to $50,000 on a newly renovated, low kilometre preloved motorhome," Mr Jeffreys says.

"When people see the quality of the finished product and just how cost effective it is they are usually blown away. The big new RVs are nice but you certainly pay for them." The benefits of the converted motorhome is that most of them are automatic, require only a normal car license and can be fitted out to your tastes, including being able to walk around your bed and make it he said.

Help is at Hand

What buyers need to remember is that when they go to purchase there is a big power imbalance. "How many motorhomes do you buy in your life? Well, you're up against salespeople who do it every day. So you have to be careful about who you listen to or you could get talked into some costly mistakes" John warns. Mr. Jeffreys has just released a complimentary information kit, "Here Come the Best Years of Your Life – A Guide for Astute Motorhome and Campervan Stress Free Travel and Genuine Lifestyle Freedom" (valued at $97). In this industry- first FREE kit Mr Jeffreys outlines just about everything you need to know to become an "informed consumer".
